FROM THE PRESIDENT'S PERCH:

This will be the last article that I will be writing as your president. I have decided not to seek reelection. It's been a great ride since the club's inception in 1992. I began as the newsletter editor, then became vicepresident, and then president. We have grown to be a very successful and solvent organization. Our newsletter and master breeder program is a great hit with our members. Our breed dominates on Champion's Row. We have a lot to be proud of.

I can not continue in an organization that does not take the feelings of all of it's members into consideration. We operate entirely on volunteers. Criticism of our volunteers only serves to thwart participation. I am referring to the editorial in the last newsletter.

I wish the club continued success. I will continue to see all of you in the Cochin aisles. Keep breeding champions!

The Passing of a Legend

It was with great sadness that I recently learned Mr. Alex Duffy, of Watertown, New York passed away at the age of 99. To say that he was a legend in the Poultry Fancy is an understatement. How many of us have a saying or motto associated with our birds? Not too many I suspect, but as the saying goes......"If they were round and fluffy, they came from Duffy". I feel privileged to be able to say that I knew Alex, and when I was breeding and showing Buff Cochin Bantams in the 1980's, I was even more taken aback when he noticed my birds at one of the Northeast shows and made it a point to find me and comment on the quality of my Buffs. I was in the presence of Cochin greatness and he was sharing breeding tips and pointers with me! How much better could it get for a young Cochin enthusiast?

A finer gentlemen, you could never meet. His breeding of large Cochins influenced the Standard of Perfection and certainly still has links to the bloodlines of today. I have included an article (page 9) from a 1982 World Cochin Family Yearbook (the yearbook was dedicated in his honor that year) that covers some of the Duffy legacy. I do not know who wrote it but I took a guess that Mr. M. C. Wallace, a noted judge from those times, may be the author. If anyone does know the author's identity, please share it with me. Below are some of the comments from famous judges on Alex's Cochins at the Madison Square Garden and Boston shows.

M. C. Wallace:

"The finest Cochins I have ever handled."

Herschel Herster:

"Big, Beautiful Cochins with all the requirements for GRAND Champion."

Arthur Schilling:

"Cochins right out of the Standard of Perfection."

Mort Cooper:

"Four of the greatest Blacks ever shown by one breeder, the first hen being nearly perfect."

Charles Burmaster:

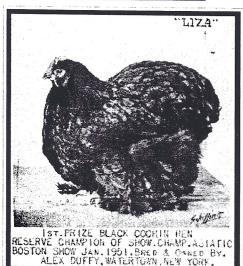

"Cochins you see once in a lifetime."

Gus Braun:

"In my seventy years judging I have never seen any better Cochins."

As a tribute of sorts, I have included some Schilling prints throughout the article, and as you can see, the Black Hen "Liza" was an incredible bird. The Poultry Fancy has lost a great man as well as a great Cochin breeder. Alex will truly be missed. (TR)

Editor's Notes:

Hello everyone!!

I hope this newsletter finds you all well, and enjoying the fall show season. Unfortunately, I feel compelled to start my editor's comments out on a bad note, by addressing the reason for Pat not running for reelection again this year. As you know, the last newsletter contained a Letter to the Editor that some took offense to, but I am of the mind set that all members have a right to express their opinions. I feel bad that something I included in the newsletter caused someone to lose an interest in the club. I have received other feedback and rebuttals on the subject and after discussing the issue with some of our officers and directors, we have collectively decided not to include those types of "Letters to the Editor" in the newsletter. That is not to say that I will not print "Letters to the Editor" which address aspects of our club, just that I will pay closer attention to how the words contained within these letters might be perceived by our members. The Officer's, Directors, and respective Chairmen are all volunteers, and as such have to fit the duties of their office into their already busy schedules. As a club I think we are solid, but I also think we need to expand our membership. The only way we can do this is by making the effort to get those Cochin Breeders who are not members to join our organization. Any one of us can sign up new members, or at least let them know how they can join.

I would like to thank Matt, Jay, and John and Pat for taking the time to write articles for this newsletter. Jay, I can absolutely relate to your comments on not sharing your weekend plans of washing and drying chickens with office co-workers! Let's keep those articles coming. Everyone in this club has a Cochin experience they can share. As I said in a previous newsletter, I am looking for articles addressing Poultry housing. Specifically that which is built to accommodate Cochins and their special requirements. Those of you with the "ultimate setups", please share some pictures and stories with the rest of the members!! This is just one subject. The possibilities are limitless!!

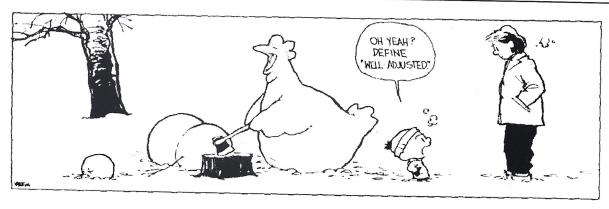

As you read this, I will have already attended the Virginia Poultry Breeder's Show, which hosted the Northeast II District meet. Photos and results from that show will be in the next newsletter. I also plan to attend the Florida Sunshine Classic in January, which is hosting the ABA National, so with any luck I will have pictures from that show too..

As we move into the holiday seasons, I find myself looking forward to Christmas. I will be traveling back to Texas to visit my children for a couple of weeks. We are always told that Holidays are a time to spend with family. I for one couldn't agree more! Have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, and may Santa leave you a dozen eggs guaranteed to hatch champions!!!

Always Cochins!

Northeast District II Update:

Greetings from the first state! All is well here in Delaware and it is officially fall now that I have a few fall shows under my belt. Our district meet in Richmond, VA (19-20 November) is only weeks away and I am extremely excited about seeing many of you there. As many of you may know I have had some special rosettes made for our district meet. The rosettes will be awarded to the champion and res. champion bantam Cochin and large Cochin as well as to the overall champion Cochin. I thought our district meet should have some incentive to show, as well as recognition. Hopefully this will be a good way of doing both, as well as awarding the best Cochins at the show.

As you will see below, Donald Wright (PA), Tom & Pat Rice (MD) and Kay St. Amour (MD) are exhibiting Cochins in number and doing well. Rich Barczewski has been showing his large partridge Cochins that he recently began with and Andrew and Donna Sholtis claimed champion Featherleg in Frederick, MD at a regional meet on a beautiful white pullet. Thanks to you all, as well as all the other exhibitors for representing our breed in the NE II District so well.

Below you will find a summary of the Cochin classes and results from the York, PA show (23-24 October) and the Frederick, MD show (6-7 November). Both of these shows were regional meets.

The York County Poultry Fanciers show took place the 23rd and 24th of October, 1999. York hosted a CI Regional Meet which consisted of 7 large Cochin entries (3 partridge, 2 black tailed red, 1 black and 1 blue) and 36 bantam Cochin entries (10 buff, 8 black, 5 white, 5 blue, 4 mottled, and 4 partridge). The best large fowl Cochin went to a black hen by Kay St. Amour, RB large fowl Cochin went to a partridge hen also by Kay St. Amour. The best and reserve bantam Cochins went to Donald Wright on a black cockerel and black hen respectively.

In large fowl Cochins BV black (hen, also BB) went to Kay St. Amour on a single entry, BV blue (hen) went to Basil Smith on a single entry, BV and RV black tailed red (cockerel and pullet) went to Kay St. Amour, BV partridge (hen, also RB) went to Kay St. Amour and RV partridge (pullet) went to Rich Barczewski.

For the bantam Cochins BV and RV buff (hen and cock) went to Donald Wright, BV and RV black (cockerel (BB) and hen (RB)) went to Donald Wright, BV and RV white (hen and cock) went to Kenneth Merrill, BV and RV blue (pullet and cock) went to Basil Smith, BV and RV mottled (cock and hen) went to Kay St. Amour, BV partridge (hen) went to John Alloway and RV partridge (pullet) went to Barbara Danley. Congratulations to all the winners!

The Maryland State Poultry Fanciers hosted their 30th annual show in Frederick, MD on the 6th and 7th of November, 1999. This too was a CI Regional Meet that had 23 large Cochin entries (6 buff, 5 black, 5 red, 5 silver laced, and 2 blue) and 35 bantam Cochin entries (17 white, 10 black, and 8 buff). The best large fowl Cochin went to a buff hen by Tom & Pat Rice, RB large fowl Cochin went to a black cock, also shown by Tom & Pat Rice. The best bantam Cochin was a white pullet by Andrew & Donna Sholtis, which went on to win Champion Featherleg, RB bantam Cochin was a black pullet by Donald Wright.

In large fowl Cochins BV buff (hen, also BB) and RV (cockerel) went to Tom & Pat Rice, BV black (cock, also RB) went to Tom & Pat Rice and RV (pullet) went to Ben Maurer, BV and RV red (cock and pullet) went to Tom & Pat Rice, BV and RV silver laced (on pullets) went to Tom & Pat Rice, BV and RV blue (on hens) also went to Tom & Pat Rice.

For the bantam Cochins BV white (pullet, also BB and Ch. Featherleg) went to Andrew & Donna Sholtis and RV (pullet) went to Jay Yobst, BV and RV black (pullet, also RB, and a cockerel) went to Donald Wright, BV buff (hen) went to Dean Ennis and RV went to Danny Dysart. Congratulations to all the winners.

Pictures from the Frederick, MD show as well as from our district meet in Richmond will appear in the next CI Newsletter. Until then continue promoting Cochins and have a joyous and blessed holiday season.

Sincere regards,

William D. Lewis

John Barca and I have been chatting back and forth on-line. He is breeding Standard Barred Cochins (one of his varieties), and shared the following breeding tips/experiences with me, to include in the newsletter.

Raising and Breeding Barreds This Year

by John Barca

I got my start in Barreds from Tim Flath in Washington. My first birds were four pullets and a cockerel, with the pullets being better typed than the male bird. Of the four females, there was one that carried better foot feathering than the other three. The middle toes were not well feathered, probably due to a lack of serious breeding in the Barred variety. However, the three that had weak toe feathering had good barring and very large body type. The cockerel had poor type and foot feathering, but I kept him anyway for breeding, because the males carry 100% of the barring gene.

First, I bred the females to a George Priest White male. When you breed a White male to a Barred female, all the male off-spring will be Barred, and all the females will be white (likewise with a Black male). I culled the White females and Barred males that had weak foot feathering, but managed to save some nice ones. Very typey!! Then I bred the Barred females to a Henderson Black male. This cross turned out the best Barred males, and the resulting Black females are nice also, with very few having foot feather problems.

I also bred the Barred females to an Urch Black male. I again got some nice Barred males from this cross, but so far no Barred females. I now crossed the Barred male to some very nice Blacks and Whites. The chicks from these matings were 100% Barred, but about 3% had to be culled initially due to poor feathering on the middle toes.

They all look typey, but are still very young. In all I hatched about 40 and probably have some 30 left.

Barred Female X Black or White Male = 1

100% Barred Males 100% Black or White Females

Barred Male X Black or White Female = 100% Barred Offspring

John also went on to say that he would probably have some Barreds for sale. Anyone interested in expanding the Barred Standards popularity can get in touch with John. #### Remember When You First Started?

-by Jay Smith

After a 25-year hiatus from poultry raising, this year I built a coop and pen and put together a small flock of blue and black standards in my back yard here in Berkeley. In October I attended my first official poultry show. Along the way, I've passed a few milestones and learned a few lessons that I'm certain many of you can relate to.

- My truck can now drive itself to the lumberyard.
- -After a few frantic afternoon visits, the workers at the local post office now have my home phone number (and perhaps my photo posted on the wall alongside the "Ten Most Wanted").
- -When your fellow office workers ask what your plans are for the weekend, you might consider omitting the part about bathing and blow-drying your chickens.
- -The folks who run our neighborhood pet store a store accustomed to selling European-brand dog foods and displaying advertisements for pet psychics and chiropractors no longer stammer and ask me to repeat my request for 300 pounds of chicken feed on a Saturday morning.
- -I now know there's a three-hour time difference between California and Tennessee and I quickly learned to apologize profusely to Dawn Ware and her very forgiving husband when I miscalculated one Saturday evening.
- -I've figured out that using wood shavings as bedding in your kennel carrier, placing that carrier in the back of your convertible Jeep and getting on the freeway is not a bright idea.
- -When trying to save money by camping out on the fairgrounds, get as far away from the cage of China geese as possible.
- -When you haven't already learned the previous lesson, don't complain to the show secretary the next morning because Phyllis in this case will dryly remind you that it is after all a poultry show.
- -And, lastly, I've learned that poultry folks are a great bunch. Dawn, John Barca and Bob Anderson have provided much-needed advice and helped me get started. Steve and the club in Paso Robles put on a fun show and his family made some great coffee! And Phyllis? Well, when I called her cantankerous on Sunday morning, I meant it only in the best way. Really!

Letter to the Editor:

Dear Tom,

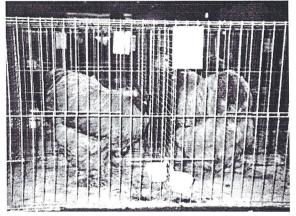

Having just returned from the processor with pictures I took while on the Stromberg sponsored European Poultry Fanciers Tour, I thought these (pictures) might be of interest. The entire Hannover, Germany, show cooped nearly 21,000 birds (estimated 1/4 pigeons) of exceptional variety and quality in all breeds. Since I raise a few Cochin Bantams, I was interested in seeing the numerous varieties on exhibit in standards and bantams.

In all breeds and varieties the Europeans seem to favor the more intense colors in the colored varieties. This also was true with the Cochins, some of which I have never seen in my limited circle of American shows.

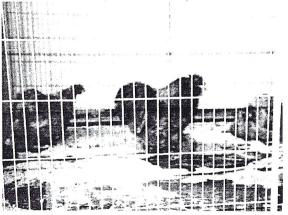

We're now getting housing in order for keeping ourselves and our birds comfortable over winter. We hope it will be an easy one, but must plan for the worst.

Best Regards,

Leon Zimdars Sullivan, Wisconsin

Mottled Cochins

By Matt McCammon

With the formation of the Cochins International club in Columbus, Ohio in 1992 came renewed interest in some of the rarer colors of Cochin bantams. The Mottled variety soon was being bred and shown by more serious breeders and exhibitors from around the country. Mottleds provide the breeder and exhibitor with an interesting and unique combination. For those who enjoy the color and type of blacks and whites, the Mottled is an eye-catching addition to the flock. They are usually nicely typed and undoubtedly flashy in appearance. For the breeder who enjoys a challenge, they are a must have. Mottleds may be improved using well-bred whites and blacks, but the Mottling gene always provides the breeder with lessons to learn!

My first Mottled bantams came from a man in Iowa named Ralph Winters. These birds were small but proportionately typed. They lacked the profuse feathering that is customary today. The big advantage these birds had was their color. They had extraordinary Mottling. The v-tips that so many breeders find impossible to produce were there. I bred this line for about two years before buying a trio of birds from Dale Dionne from Illinois. These birds had been crossed on blacks and whites and had good type. They were a little too white. When crossed with my birds, however, they produced great results! At this point I officially considered myself hooked on Mottleds.

Mottled Cochins go through a variety of plumage changes during their first year of life. For this reason, breeders are advised to keep them for at least nine months before culling for color. When chicks feather out, they are mostly black with a white "bib" on their breast. As they mature and molt, the bib is replaced with black feathers. At the age of three months, they are often mostly black with only a few white "flecks" on the head, neck, and breast. These birds will continue with this plumage through the pullet and cockerel year. If shown, these birds are NOT to look like hens and cock birds. They will be darker with less mottling. Most judges don't consider this when judging, but they should. As the birds become adults, they become more Mottled with each molt. Two year olds will be expected to exhibit the correct ratio of black and white feathers called for in the standard. Young birds that are too light will not meet the standard as adults and should be discarded. Color variations occur often even in adults and although one may be tempted to breed a light hen to a dark male or vice-versa, it is not recommended. Usually the progeny are too light or dark. Breeding from the most correctly colored birds is best.

Mottleds have generally remained free of some of the difficulties seen in the other varieties. They have correctly sized combs and few males have long blades at the ends of their combs. Females actually lay most of the year and are not excessively broody if eggs are frequently collected. Eye color and feet color tend to be good. Artificial insemination is required and the interested breeder will have to learn to do this, like it or not!

Mottled Cochins present more benefits that drawbacks for the interested breeder. They have pleasant personalities and tend to be more active foragers than most Cochins I have raised. I challenge interested Cochin breeders from all parts of the country to try Mottled Cochins. Find a reliable breeder in your area and give a few a try. You'll be glad you did!

MY SUMMER VACATION

by Pat Lacey

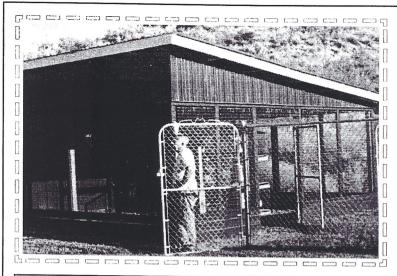

Joe Mazur and I arranged to trade 4 white Cochin bantams for 4 black Cochin bantams. My very good "Chicken Buddy" Paul Ashbrook moved out to Omak Washington from Wisconsin about 1 1/2 years ago (he never even asked my permission before he and Mary made their decision). Paul and I had been cosecretaries of the Wisconsin International Poultry show for seven years. Paul is a Presbyterian Minister and the Omak area was where he had his first ministry.

Paul lives directly south of Joe about one hour from the Canadian border and Joe lives 2 1/2 hours north of the border in Enderby. Both Joe and Paul live in the Okanogan River Valley. This valley is where just about all the apple, peaches, and pears in the world are grown. Omak is a real old west town with large ranches, cattle that roam free, and cougars! Where the land is not irrigated it is desert, with sage brush and cactus. The surprise was the trip north of the Canadian border into British Columbia. We encountered a tourist area much like Phoenix, Arizona. There was heavy traffic, lots of stop lights, and gorgeous lakes. As we continued to drive toward Joe's we realized we had passed the point of no return. We did not have enough time to drive back to the border to make U.S. Customs before they Paul Ashbrook standing in front of his "Cougar Proof" Chicken Coop. When first arriving in Omak, Paul lost birds to a cougar. He has taken great steps to protect his birds, including a large "Cougar" dog.

Let's talk border crossings. In order to cross the Canadian border, one must obtain the Federal Form VS FORM 17-6 to be filled out by a registered veterinarian who comes out to inspect your flock and your NPIP standing. (Cost $24.00). This form is then sent on to the Federal Vet for his signature and seal. (Federal fees $21.00) I can now cross the border. The Canadian Vet didn't come on duty until 10:00am. This was our problem. If he had come in at 7.20am we could have make the round trip, 10:00am was slicing it pretty thin. It has always been my experience that the people that work at Canadian border are relatively pleasant in contrast to the crotchety rude people that work at U.S. Customs. We stopped for our Vet inspection at the Canadian border and everyone was pleasant. (Canadian Inspection $35.00 Canadian).

After a beautiful, but slow ride we reached Joe's Dairy farm. He's in a gorgeous area with large hills covered in timber jutting up from the meadow. Joe was "baching" it as his wife was visiting her mothers. He prepared us a delicious lunch. We then went out to his poultry buildings and he pointed out the birds that I could pick from. He has nice birds, it took me a long time to decide. Joe then gave me his customs papers that he had gotten from his government. We thanked Joe for a nice time and visit and began our way back to the U.S. border. We had hoped that the U.S. Customs would let us leave the birds and come back in the morning for our inspection. Not a chance! They growled at us and sent us back to Canada. So....my husband, bless his heart, stayed with the birds at a motel in Canada. He went to the motel office to explain the situation with the chickens and customs, so she charged him an extra $5.00 for pets. Paul and I left him and went back to Omak to do Paul's chicken chores. I got up early and returned to Canada to get Mike and the chickens. We approached the grumpy U.S. Customs people. As luck would have it the regular Vet was on vacation but they did have a substitute Vet on duty. We drove around to the Vet building. He was really nice and REALLY good looking. He looked like a young Sam Elliot. It took us about a hour as "Sam" couldn't find the password to get into the computer and made several phone calls for help. Border fees $16.00 and we were on our way. Birds free -Misc. Fees & motel $135.00.

Other than the fact that I now owe my husband BIG TIME it was an adventure.

THE DUFFY COCHIN SAGA

In the history of the most beloved of agricultural and kindred pursuits, that which will lead farthest into the Infinite future, and provide the greatest inspiration to happiness on earth, lies the husbandry of live stock. In the history of livestock there is no achievement to register more deeply in the human heart than that which took its rise from Alex Duffy's devotion to Cochin Fowl at Watertown, New York, and was cherished by two nations. Indeed Duffy and his Cochins have been known and admired here and there all over the world.

There is always a shade of sadness at what seemed on the surface to be the end of something cherished. The passing of the Duffy's Cochins in 1972 was not without a tragedy of its own. It is a gift of creation, however, that tragedy is smothered in its own ashes while the legacy of good, like the wings of the hawk, surmount the air currents and beckon pilgrims onward. Human improvements are even slower than the improvements accomplished in the breeding of fowl; hence we have the tragedies of life seen and unseen humanity at large.

The fact that the Duffy Cochin flock was in the end reduced to a nullity by predatory dogs has nothing to do with the virtue of their presence or their contributions to human happiness. They took their rise in the agricultural area close to Watertown. This was an agricultural area where much of the population worked in the city. That was a time when many more people were held in the thralldom of the purebred poultry fancy than today. The pioneer spirit was still deep in the essence of things. The rugged Cochins had beauty, grandeur and appeal.

At that time the different kinds of fowl were known to a higher percentage of people than today. These people added to a rich blend of national character and the true joy of American home life, with all of which Alex Duffy was in stride.

At the poultry show held in the Watertown armories in 1912; Alex, then a boy, saw some Buff Cochins that seized his fancy. He came home talking about them and went through the same thing the next year. His father heard all this, casually as it seemed. The senior Duffy was able to acquire a pair of large Buff Cochins for twenty-five dollars, which to that neighborhood was an amazing figure to pay for a pair of chickens. These birds came from the strain of C.W. Case, Rochester, Michigan, who had some of the best in the country at that time. This pair was a birthday present to young Alex for his thirteenth birthday in 1913.

The senior Duffy was a construction superintendent and ran everything in an orderly way. He cautioned young Alex that if he ever found these chickens being neglected he would see that they went on the table promptly as food. A parental suggestion at the Duffy family precincts had a way of being accepted as law.

Thirty-five years later, a week before he passed on, the senior Duffy felicitated Alex on his faithful care of the Cochins and declared the investment to be the best he had ever made. In the twenties, when Alex was playing baseball and rugby football, his father took care of the birds. He showed them under the name of Pine Grove Farm.

In 1927, Alex had his first pair of Black Cochins, a pair from Amburst Brothers of Pennsylvania, noted Asiatic breeders. These he traded with Herschel Herster, illustrious breeder and judge during the first half of this century. In return he got some Whites along with some Partridge.

Late in the 1930 decade Mr. Herster telephoned Alex to say that he wanted to have a certain Black Cochin hen and two of her female offspring which he believed were destined for a long step ahead in Cochin progress. They were of the old Williams strain of Massachusetts. Now Mr. Duffy thinks that his own contribution of feather quality to the Cochin breed and the Standard system goes back to that hen. Certainly the integration of this particular blood line came to be regarded as a highlight of Standard breeding and the zenith point in Cochin feather quality.

At that time in large Cochins the principal interest was in Buffs, which were better known and more widely disseminated then the other Cochins. The quality varied as much as the spread for the reason that more non-exhibiting people, not so particular about the finer show points, kept them at that time. The thirties were a long building period with a continuous slope which led upward into the forties.

Farther on in the forties the weight of this resurgence of interest was really at high tide in twentieth century Cochin history. Buff color was a more contentious problem at that time. Masters of the game were competing at Madison Square Garden in New York City and the awards were split many ways. I remember handling a Duffy Buff male, a cockerel in fact, that became Champion Buff Cochin and Champion Opposite Sex Asiatic of the Show. He had that Conspicuous Cochin character, the full feather, the Cochin undersling

The strange thing was that out of all that display of Cochins, the Buffs predominating, the bird of destiny was Duffy's immortal hen, 'Black Rose'.

For my memory the Madison Square Garden debut of Duffy's hen, 'Black Rose' renewed an upward sweep in all Cochins. At that time the Cochin bantam interest was well forward in its surge. More Cochin bantams were being shown in North America than large Cochins with an equal angle of quality spread, but out of a greater total, a greater number of good ones. Many Cochin bantam breeders were also breeders of the large Cochins. Cochin bantams brought problems not present in the large size and were free of problems more worrisome in the large sizes. Arthur Schilling, the illustrious Standard artist, was trying to make the Standard ideals look like both.

The large Black Cochins, always beautiful to me, were showing some improvements in themselves. They belonged, however, in the breed with the third biggest weight in the Standard system. They didn't have that kind of weight though. Lack of broader cultivation was an obstacle to their embodiment of the rugged character that the Buff Cochins had transmitted to the American breeds.

At the Arthur Schilling testimonial show held at Rochester, New York, in the early forties, Alex Duffy's token exhibit included a Black Cochin hen which was Champion Cochin at that show. She was a good specimen of the best at that time, good enough to make a judge stop and ponder.

From this bird to 'Black Rose' was a big jump. Black Rose was over Standard weight. She had the spectacle of great size, the outward evidence of stout bone, the convexity of contours perfectly woven to a smooth surface, a glittering sheen, and a spread of footings that she picked up vertically like a section of sod.

All those lines and all those curves were brought to a complete reality by the amplitude of fluff in the plumage. Besides the big, broad web of feather, there was abundant fluff in the general plumage, augmented as it was, by abundant aftershaft.

To look back on all this seems short enough in retrospect. Changes usually come slowly, a combination of evolution and decision. The American Poultry Association had adopted the principal of common breed shape in large fowl and bantams, something very hard to bring about. That is because there are differences in character between the big and small that are as inescapable as the different sounds of their crowing. These differences had their effect on type influence.

When 'Black Rose' hit the situation she took care of all type problems with one stroke, which was two to three pounds of weight proportionately laid in. She and her line established the utmost in type to which Cochin experts of today look upward and look backward in striving for their ideal creations. For three successive years this 'Black Rose' hen of Duffy's was Grand Champion at the path finding Madison Square Garden Show, the Cochin record of the century.

To bring about that common type of fowl and bantam ideal there were two lines of effort converging through the years and across the sky. It was like the far-flung arms of the wild goose wedge come to a point made by their leader. The common type had been achieved.

I don't know exactly how this was brought about. I didn't inquire. Some things are more intriguing in the conjecture than in the revelation. The line was fully established when birds emerged from it in both sexes to top the winnings at the New York State Fair.

In 1951 Duffy followed in with his 'Liza' to make the picture permanent. She was the Grand Champion Asiatic and Reserve Grand Champion of the 1951 Boston Show. This bird had the abundant fluff which she carried primly. She achieved an unprecedented nearness to perfection by a little more web to establish more firmly the coverage of web over the fluff. The metallic surface, quality of feather and brilliant sheen of this bird was another breakthrough and a particular achievement that I have not seen surpassed before or since.

Looking backward across the ups and downs of Cochin prosperity, the big Asiatic birds seem to have enjoyed a period of expanded good fortune around the mid-century mark of the forties and fifties. The more recent years have added some phenomenal Buff males in the Southwest, Middle-East and East, some of them comparable to the Boston Blacks.

There was quite a furor fanned up by that 1951 Boston Class, the enthusiasm still clinging to the outburst of acclaim which broke and spread on the Atlantic seaboard when the Cochin incursion first hit the Atlantic seaboard states more than a century earlier.

All this was augmented when Boston was designated the official National Meet of the American Standard Cochin Club and Mort Cooper, recognized judicial authority, was assigned to the judging. Mr. Cooper declared Duffy's Black 'Liza' to be the best Black Cochin shown in his time and also spoke glowingly of the Duffy White Cochins.

Arthur Schilling, Standard artist, had already described Duffy's Madison Square Garden winning Blacks as Cochins that could have stepped right out of the Standard of Perfection. Herschel Herster, Herb Comstock and Charles Burmaster, all noted authorities, referred in superlative tones to this line of Blacks. This was the high point of a Cochin epoch.

The 'Liza' hen gave Arthur Schilling the model to illustrate the ideal for the finest presentation of the best Standard Cochin quality of the day. Besides the neater surface she achieved a most admirable nicety in the spread and rotundity of cushion carrying down over the tail. It was the kind of cushion that would shed water quickly. She also carried to perfection the muchdiscussed Cochin crouch made possible by consistent depth, front and rear. The actual bird and the Schilling picture were perfectly similar, just another slant on the same ideal.

I doubt if Duffy missed winning 1st hen at any time he showed Blacks after that. After the close of the Madison Square Garden show he showed from time to time at the New York State Fair and regularly at the Jefferson County Fair, his exhibits not numerous but extremely good. When he became president of the Jefferson County Fair, he showed only on a non-competitive basis. Reviewing his Cochin exhibits at that show with Art Schallenberg, one of the most versatile and capable judges of the realm, the two of us decided that Duffy's best exhibits were staged at this home show.

Poultry on the Internet: More and more people are using the internet to communicate and find information. I can attest that the internet is a very powerful tool, complete with Search Engines and Web Sites for just about any subject you can think of. Donna Lamb and I discussed poultry Websites through E-mail correspondence and decided that it would be a great idea to include some poultry related Websites for our on-line members to investigate. Below are some of Donna's favorite Websites with her comments:

http://www.chickenchic.com/ - a poultry related catalog of housewares, clothes, etc.

http://www.poultryconnection.com/ - Best poultry site I've found, includes message board, links, classifieds, calendar, etc.

http://www.InsideTheWeb.com/mbs.cgi/mb808860 - is the Cochin board, but it's losing interest and not much going on.

http://the-coop.org/index.html - The coop is another nice interactive poultry site

http://www.poultryclub.org/home.htm - Poultry club of Great Britain, interesting http://www.cyborganic.com/people/feathersite/Poultry/BRKPoultryPage.html - Featherside - good links and articles.

http://www.manzanodragon.com/manzanovalley/cyberindex.html - cyberlibrary is great place for writeup on diseases and cures.

I have several poultry sites that I visit regularly. I have listed two below, and will work on write-ups for others to be included in the next newsletter. Anyone with a favorite Website, send it to me and I will include it/them in future newsletters.

http://www.cyborganic.net/People/feathersite/Poultry/BRKPoultryPage.html - Very informative site with Links to a number of other poultry related sites, including Breed Clubs http://www.ampltya.com/posted here.

- APA Website. Very well done, with pictures and links. They have their Master Exhibitor points
